FUNERAL OF AN EX-SENATOR

Honors Paid to the Memory of Mr. Mc-Donald at His Casket and the Grave.

Large Gathering of Citizens Who Esteemed the Distinguished Man-Beantiful Floral De-. signs-The Services and Sermon.

The funeral of ex-Senator McDonald, at his residence, No. 564 North Meridian street, yesterday afternoon, was attended by a very large number of people. Among them were many from different parts of the State, and these, with the neighbors of the deceased, persons from all parts of the city, lawyers, doctors, merchants and, indeed, representatives of nearly every vocation gathered early. This was because between 1 and 3 o'clock the remains could be viewed. A constant stream of people called to see them, and to those who had known the ex-Senator in his days of rugged health, the ravages of the last illness seemed very marked, yet the expression on the wasted face was one of peace. The body lay in a handsome, cloth-covered casket in the rear parlor, and upon its lid were floral offerings from the immediate family of the deceased. The mantel, piano and several tables were also filled with floral designs that came from friends, neighbors and Democratic organizations. The Hendricks club sent a desk and chair, recalling those be used when Mr. McDonald was in the United States Senate. On the surface of the desk was the name of the club, and on the back of the chair the ex-Senator's monogram. The offering of the German-American club was a scroll bearing the club's name and the word "Constitution." The Gray Cinb gave a cross and anchor, and the State officers sent a large bed of yellow roses, with a card on which was written, "The last expressions of love and respect." The city officials gave a cross and anchor of large size. Other designs were there from Mr. and Mrs. John M. Butler, Judge and John W. Murphy.
Up to the last minute of the hours given to viewing the remains men and women passed through the south door of the residence, and, going past the casket, turned into the hall to make their exit from the front door. The last of the line were the Democratic clubs, city and State officials. As they came out of the house the people again became part of the great crowd in the yard, street and on the sidewalk. For squares above and below the residence were groups of men and women, while the curbs were lined on both sides of the street with carriages. Within the parlors and dining-room were filled with ladies, while the family, with relatives and pall-bearers, were in the library.

The service began with the reading by Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, of the Second Presbyterian Church, of those well-known words of hope beginning, "I am the resurrection and the life." This was followed by the singing of "Nearer, my God, to Thee" by a choir composed of Mrs. Margaret But-ler Snow, Miss Lillie Herron, Maurice But-ler and Fred Herron, jr. Rev. M. L. Hames, D. D., of the First Presbyterian Church, then took up the service and read the words beginning, "Now is Christ risen from the dead."

MR. MILBURN'S SERMON.

"We are met together," said Mr. Milburn, at the close of Dr. Haines's reading, beginning the funeral sermon, which was not preached from any text, "to pay the last offices of respect and reverence to the memory of a great and good man, and to sympathize with those whose hearts are bereaved. Joseph Ewing McDonald, whose body, cold and mute, lies here in this coffin, needs not our consolations. He has fought the fight, and, after three-score years and ten of struggle, has finished the course and attained triumpnantly the goal set by destiny for him to reach. Whatever may be the outcome of this mystery of human life, he, at least, is at rest, he is eternally at peace. If our hope be all illusive and the tomb be final, yet, sepultured in the silence of the final, yet, sepultured in the silence of the grave, our friend, our leader will sleep sublimely on, and craves neither our pity nor our tears. If, on the other hand, our hope be real, and the tomb be not the goal, but an entrance of a higher life, then, surely, the dead claims not our grief. He has entered into the eternal secret, and we believe his spirit sweeps that far-shining glory around the white-faced orbit of eternal life.

"Let us not be jealous of the grave, the common home of all. Let us not rebuke it by our grief. It holds the great secret of secrets, of rest, and whether it be rest in the void or in the bosom of God our brother warrior has entered and forever more abides. It is not the dead, it is the living that claim, by the urgency of unutterable grief, our sympathy, our consolation and our strength. But how insufficient are our words to assuage the grief of those who suffer and to wipe away the fears. Death awallows up our feeble, stammering sympathies. But there are consolations that, when time has moderated our anguish and soothed the agitation of our hearts, us · peace. Consolation flower-seeds that lie beneath snow; when the sunshine the snow; when the sunshine comes they will fructify. The first of these consolations is the simple belief in God. You are sad to-day, my friends; you have lost a husband whose love has been a devotion, an intense and fervent love; you have lost a father; you have lost a counsellor, a companion who has guided you these many years, and what shall the minister of Christ say to you in this dark moment of your grief? Shall be eulogize the dead and speak of his splendid achievements? You know how powerless this is to soothe away the anguish of your heart. What avails this glory that is in the past? What we want is the glory that awaits us in the dawning of the perfect day-and faith in the goodness, the tenderness, the love of FAITH IN HOUR OF DEATH. "This was the faith," continued the preacher, "in which Joseph Ewing Mc-Donald rested in such perfect confidence in the hour of death-s faith in God's wisdom and goodness. He stayed his faith on the goodness of the Eternal, and went down in the valley of the shadow of death with a brave heart. I do not seek to prove God. but I beg of you to believe, to look past all doubts and fears, and believe submissively in the fastness of God. You know that in the great eternal plan no tear is wept entirely in vain, and that in the deep unfathomable future some great light will illumine the graves of our dead. To believe in the immortality of the spirit is a native instinct of the human soul. Reason supports the instinct. It seems impossible to believe that the great being who holds the stars and planets in His hand, and who rolls the suns upon their tireless course, shall fail before the problem of the salvation of the soul of man. It is impossible to believe that the soil out of which the flower has grown is eternal, while the flower, with its lovely blossoms, must pass away. It is impossible to believe that the material side is everlasting, while the human soul is transient. Yet on this side of heaven the facts are cheerless and dark. The silence of the grave is a terrible anguish for doubts. Our dead vanish from our sight, and they return not from behind the tremulous limits that separate eternity from time with any apocaly ptic view of that which hes beyond our sight. We cry out, but no voice answers back. We shout out in the auguish of despair, but all we hear is the reverberation of our grief along the everlasting hills. The facts of heaven are very dark, and the only refuge here is in the victory of Jesus Christ over darkness and the grave. Paul is right. 'If Christ be not risen, then our hope is vain.' But if Christ risen, if the great gospel of Christianity be true, if the mighty Christian church is founded on an everlasting fact, if the crucified Redeemer has once and forever broken the bands of the grave, has risen victorious and triumphant over death, then, my friends, you and I may hope to-day. We may stand over the grave and lay the body of this great, good man in the earth, cover it with flowers, the tokens of our reverence | cumulation of months. All these impur-

where beyond the range of our vision. At peace in the arms of the Eternal, at rest in the calm of the bosom of God.

A MORAL LEGACY.

"And yet another consolation remains to you who are bereaved by the gloom of death to-day, and that is the gradeur of the moral legacy that Joseph Ewing McDonald has bequeathed to you-his wife, his son, his relatives, his friends. I think there is no sweeter comfort than to look upon the face of our beloved dead knowing that they have lived loyal to this light and that they stand approved by the critical and impartial conscience of the world. Joseph Ewing McDonald was a man of regal spirit. Nature and a great personal conscientiousness conspired together to fashion a characteron great and ample lines. He was a commanding personality. Commanding by the stateliness of his physique, his greatness of mind, by his solid properties of conscience. He was a whole and comprehensive man, large in all dimensions—in his ideas, his affections; in his relations to his family, in his polities and in his faith. In him were finely blended the elements that go to make a beautiful soul-strength and tenderness. In his conscience the sternness of December mingled with the gentleness of June. There were grandeur and beauty in the man, in the life that he lived and as he died. There was a Pauline dignity, simplicity and trust about the last hours he spent upon this earth. He had been a member of a Christian church, but it was his desire to publicly renew his profession of faith as he stood upon the brink of the grave. With a faith simple, calm and pure, after seventy years and more, he committed his soul to the care of his Redeemer and fell asleep in the arms of the eterni-"He fell asleep as a child," said the preacher in conclusion, "lulled into perfect security and calm by the sweetness of a mother's song, by the gentleness of a mother's arms. This great and good servant of home, city, State, Nation, sleeps in the embrace of the grave until the summons shall come from the lips of the Eternal, and we shall rise with him in the full glory of the perfect day; where we shall see no more as through a glass darkly, but face to face."

This was followed by prayer by Rev. Dr. Haines, the singing by the choir of "Rock of Ages," and benediction by Mr. Milburn, which concluded the services at the resi-

Immediately at the close of the services the honorary pall-bearers came from the house, they being Messrs. Wm. S. Hubbard, John W. Murphy, John M. Butler, John P. Frenzel, John S. Williams, of Lafayette, and R. J. Bright, of Washington, Gen. T. Morris, Judge Roache and Senator Voor-Following them was the casket, borne by police patrolmen Richardson, Tie-ben, Caldwell, Wilson, Giblin and Hager-man, they being in full regulation uniform. The carriages were then filled, Rev. Joseph

A. Milburn and Dr. Haines occupying the first, with those assigned to the honorary pall-bearers following In the other carriages in order were seated Mrs. Joseph E. McDonald, Malcolm A. McDonald, Senator McDonald's son; James Mc-Donald, of Attica, Ind., and Mrs. Frances Marsh, Hamilton, O., Senator McDonald's Marsh, Hamilton, O., Senator McDonald's brother and sister; Scott McDonald and Frank McDonald, Pittsburg, and Miss Jessie McDonald, Washington, D. C., grand-children of Senator McDonald; also Lydia Jenkins, housekeeper in the McDonald home; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepherd, Hamilton, O.; William D. Kerr, half-brother, and Jesse B. Caldwell, Jeffersonville, son-in-law of the deceased; Thomas Ripp and wife of Covington Jeffersonville, son-in-law of the deceased; Thomas Rinn and wife, of Covington, nephew and niece; George McDonald, of Attica, a nephew, and Frank Farnsworth, Washington. D. C., brother-in-law of Senator McDonald. Col. Don Piatt and wife, Macochee, O., cousins of the deceased, and Jesse and Charles Andrev, Lafayette, nephews; Maurice Butler, Miss Roache and Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus W. Snow; Mrs. Col. N. H. McLean, of Cincinnati; John C. Fay, junior partner of Senator McDonald's Washington firm; J. M. Adamson, Covington, and Joseph Nichol, Washington, D. C.

ton, D. C.

The line was lengthened by three carriages containing the State officers and several more with city officials, and in addition there were many private convey-ances. At Sevent's street, the platoon of police, under command of Captain Quigley, and the clubs that led the procession, formed, with uncovered heads, a line on either side of the street, through which the hearse and carriages passed. The clubs then broke ranks and took the electric cars on Illinois street to the cemetery gate.

AT THE GRAVE. There the line was again formed in the following order:

Hendricks Club. Gray Club. Cleveland Club. State officers in carriages. Mayor and city officers in carriages. Judges and county officers in carriages. Pall-bearers. Family and friends in carriages.

Citizens in carriages. After a march to the McDonald lot, which is marked by a stately Scotch granite obelisk, the clubs formed a hollow square on lisk, the clubs formed a hollow square on three sides of the grave, leaving the north side to the family and friends. The services were very simple, Rev. Dr. Haines reading the Presbyterian form of burial service, beginning with, "I heard a voice from heaven saying, blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." As he read the words "dust to dust," a handful of earth was sprinkled on the casket. Rev. Mr. Milburn then offered a fervent prayer, in which the virtues and life of the deceased were referred to as cause for thankfulness to God that such men live upon this fulness to God that such men live upon this earth. The prayer over, the mourners and friends went to their carriages, and were driven back to the city, leaving the lowering of the casket and sealing of the stone-Mrs. McDonald's brother, Mr. Farns-worth, will remain with her for several days, as will Mrs. March. Some of the other relatives left for their homes last night and the rest will go to-day.

Pastors, Choir and Organists. The official members of the Meridianstreet Methodist Church have unanimously granted their pastor, Dr. H. A. Cleveland, and the choir and organist, a vacation of four weeks, to begin at such time as may best suit the pastor. It has been arranged that during this vacation the pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church and its choir and organist will occupy the Meridian-street Church, and in return, during a similar vacation of the persons named of the Second Church, Dr. Cleveland and the musicians mentioned will occupy the Second Church. The dates of the vacations have not yet been agreed upon. There will be no night services at the Meridian-street Church until after the conference, which meets at Washington, Sept. 16. The committee on pulpit supply of that church has resolved to ask for the appointment of Dr. Cleveland for the next year, and its report has been confirmed by the official board of the church.

Two Small Fires.

The house of John Sweeney, No. 715 North Mississippi street, was damaged by fire, vesterday morning, owing to a defective fine. The loss was $100. A barn belonging to Fred Beck, No. 742 South Illi-nois street, was destroyed by fire of incendiary origin last night. The loss was about that of the morning fire.

Events to Occur. The eighth anniversary of the organization of George H. Thomas Post will be observed on the lith of July. The Sunday-school of the Evangelical Association will have a picnic at Bethany Park to-day. The train will leave East street at 7:30 A. M. and the Union Station ten minutes later. In the entertainment to be given at the Seventh Presbyterian Church this evening for the benefit of the Hadley Industrial Home for Girls, in addition to Miss Mc-Corkle, the whistler, Miss Louise Schrader and Mr. Dochez will take part. Besides the musical and literary exercises, tableaux are to be given. The executive committee of last year's trades-union demonstration, D. F. Kennedy, August Tamm, H. C. Gale, James H Deery and Ben Henn request all unions of this city and vicinity to send delegates to a meeting next Sunday, at 10 o'clock A. M., at Mansur Hall, to make arrangements for a parade and pienie on Labor day. Sept. 7. Each union is entitled to two delegates.

J. V. Sweetser and wife and Dr. William Fiynn, all of Marion, were in the city yes-terday, and left on an afternoon train for New York to take a steamer for Europe. It is their purpose to visit England, Scotland and Italy, spending most of their time in the last-named country. Mr. Sweetser will be met by his daughter in New York, who will accompany the party.

There was a very enjoyable buck-board party given on Teesday afternoon and evening. The party went to Broad Ripple, and thence, by row-boats, up the canal. They returned, by moonlight, to the Ripple for supper. In the party were Mr. Gus Coburn and Miss Annie Peck, Mr. Lynn Martindale and Miss Marie Allen, Mr. W. F. C. Golt and Miss Mary Martindale, Mr. Ben Nichols and Miss Lemist.

North Meridian street, just below Seventh, attracted the attention of hundreds of people last night, from 5 o'clock until after 10, the occasion being an out-of-doors children's party, to which over two hundred invitations had been given, and nearly every one was accepted. It was given by Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Backus and Mrs. Louisa Tonsey. The houses and grounds of the two families, which adjoin, were handsomely decorated, and everything that could contribute to the happiness of the little folks was at command in music, games, dancing and refreshments. FREDLOCK-VAN BUSKIRK.

A wedding occurred last night at the Denison, the bride being Miss Rose Van Buskirk, and the groom Dr. A. M. Fredlock, of Elkins, W. Va. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. R. Van Buskirk. of the Third Christian Church, who used the marriage service of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Miss Van Buskirk was attended by Miss Kate Kumbarger, of Dobbin, W. Va., and Dr. Fredlock's best man was his brother, Mr. James C. Fredlock. The bridal party entered the parlors in procession, first coming the brides-maid and groomsman, followed by the groom and Mrs. D. C. Van Buskirk. Next was the bride on the arm of her brother, Mr. D. C. Van Buskirk, who gave her away. The bride's dress was very handsome white corded silk, elaborately trimmed with point lace, and that of the brides-maids was of white silk, with similar trimmings, while Mrs. Van Buskirk wore a canary-colored silk, trimmed with crepe de chine. Each of these ladies carried exquisite bouquets of roses. The parlors were handsomely decorated with plants and flowers. After the decorated with plants and flowers. After the congratulations supper was served in parlor No. 2. The guests from out of town were Miss Getty Van Buskirk and Mrs. Mary A. Van Buskirk, Gosport; Miss Josie Van Buskirk, Greencastle; Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Stephenson, Worthington; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Van Buskirk, Bloomfield, and Mrs. F. M. Stephenson and son, Ellettsville. The bridal party will leave this afternoon for the West, and visit several of the watering places together. After July 8 Dr. and Mrs. Fredlock will be at their home at Elkins, W. Va. LUTZ-COOK.

A wedding occurred last night at No. 38 Park avenue, the bride and groom being Miss Margaret Cook, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cook, and Mr. Nicholas Lutz. The ceremony was by the Rev. Dr. Jenckes, recter of St. Paul's P. E. Church, and was performed in the presence of about one hundred guests. Miss Emma Cook, sister of the bride, and Mr. Samuel Townsend were brides-maid and groomsman, and Mr. Will Klepler was the usher. The bride and brides-maid were attired in cream white trimmed with lace and each carried hand-some bouquets of roses. The house was decorated with plants and flowers. After the reception and refreshments Mr. and Mrs. Lutz went to their home, No. 171 East Vermont street, which had been furnished complete. Many presents were given to both bride and groom.

WALTERS-WOODRUFF. A very pretty home wedding occurred yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Henry D. Woodruff, on North Mississippi street. Miss Martha A. Woodruff, only daughter of the late Henry D. Woodruff, and Mr. Mason Walters were married by the Rev. M. B. Hyde, of the M. E. Church, in the presence of the relatives and a few friends. The bride was becomingly attired in white mull and lace. There were no brides-maid or groomsman, as in place of them the mother and near relatives stood by the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Walters left for Cambridge City and Cincinnati, to be absent a week, after which time they will be at home to their friends with Mrs. Woodruff, at No. 1116 North Mississippi street.

MESSERSMITH-LACKEY. Mr. W. P. Messersmith and Miss Ardella Lackey were married last night at the Ebenezer Lutherau Church, near Howlands. A reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lackey immediately after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith will be at home to their friends after July 1, at Brightwood.

Talking About Selling.

Some of the Y. M. C. A. directors think a fine building with the proceeds of the sale. Their present property, they say, can be sold for $80,000 or $90,000. On this they can meet a large debt on their building and leave enough for the purpose stated.

The Evidence Against Them. At Brazil, yesterday, two young men, giving the names of Boyd and Forrest, were arrested on a charge of circulating counterfeit silver coin. They were taken to Terre Haute on the order of the secret service officer, and their valise in the express office, sent from Indianapolis, was opened. It contained counterfeit coin, molds, raw material and all the necessary tools for manufacturing it. There were twenty-six dimes, twenty-six half-dollars and twentysix twenty-five-cent pieces. When arrested Boyd had a card, with his name as business manager of an electrical supply house at No. 122 Massachusetts avenue, this city. Investigation showed that No. 122 Massachusetts avenue is now adver-tised for rent, with no evidence of ever having been occupied as an electrical sup-
